Unleashing Potential

Why We Must Let Them Play

By Peter Matangira

In a world where structured schedules and adult expectations often dominate a child's life, it's easy to forget the importance of unstructured play. The upcoming Hearts Christian College Arts Festival, themed "Let Them Play," serves as a timely reminder of the value of giving children the freedom to explore, create, and develop their God-given talents.

When we say "Let Them Play," we're not just advocating for recreational activities; we're championing an approach to childhood that prioritizes discovery, imagination, and self-directed learning. By giving children the space to play, we're allowing them to tap into their natural curiosity, creativity, and energy.

Through play, children develop essential skills like problem-solving, critical thinking, and collaboration. They learn to navigate risks, build resilience, and develop a sense of confidence and self-worth.

Play also fosters creativity, imagination, and innovation – skills that are crucial for success in an ever-changing world.

Moreover, play is not just about cognitive development; it's also about emotional and social growth. When children play, they learn to express themselves, manage their emotions, and build relationships with others. Play helps them develop empathy, understanding, and a sense of community.

As we celebrate the arts and creativity at HCC festival, we're reminded that every child has a unique spark within them. By letting them play, we're giving them the opportunity to discover their passions, develop their talents, and shine in their own way.

So, let's make a conscious effort to let them play – to give them the freedom to explore, create, and dream. Let's unleash their potential, foster their growth, and watch them thrive. In doing so, we'll not only be nurturing the next generation of artists, innovators, and leaders but also helping them become the best versions of themselves.

LEADERSHIP REIMAGINED: Lindon Nenyasha Zanga's Vision for a Transformed Chinhoyi University of Technology.

As we stand at the threshold of a new era in student leadership, one name has emerged as a beacon of hope and transformation: Lindon Nenyasha Zanga. With a proven track record of leadership, advocacy, and community service, Lindon is poised to take the reins as the next President of the Student Representative Council (SRC) at Chinhoyi University of Technology.

Lindon's leadership journey began at the tender age of 15, and has since been marked by a relentless pursuit of excellence and a commitment to serving others. As a former Junior Member of Parliament, he gained invaluable experience in advocacy, policymaking, and community engagement. The founder of Zanga Foundation, Lindon has worked tirelessly to promote education, empowerment, and social responsibility among young people.

During his tenure as Minister for Legal and Academic Affairs, Lindon embarked on a bold mission to review and reform the university's policies. His achievements are a testament to his unwavering commitment to creating a more inclusive, supportive, and empowering environment for all students:

- Removal of the repeat semester policy, ensuring students have a fair chance to succeed
- Advocacy for students' rights, amplifying the voices of the community
- Ensuring every student has access to registration and examination, regardless of economic constraints

As President, Lindon promises to:

- Foster a culture of transparency, accountability, and inclusivity within the SRC
- Amplify the voices of marginalized students, ensuring everyone has a seat at the table
- Collaborate with faculty, administration, and external partners to drive positive change and innovation
- Promote student entrepreneurship, innovation, and social responsibility

Inspiring a New Generation

Lindon's story is a powerful reminder that leadership knows no age, background, or boundary. He urges young people to embrace their passions, develop their skills, and take ownership of their futures. Together, we can create a brighter, more just, and more prosperous world.
